12 hours after gunfight – suspect shooter is still on the loose

The police in Burlington have not found the suspect shooter from the shooting in the Cascade Mall yet. Therefore the police release further information about the shooter and ask the community for help: “We do not have an identity on the individual yet. And we could certainly use the community’s help with that”, Chris Cammock, an officer in the Mount Vernon police department said.

Further on the officer gives an update on the suspect:
He is male, “probably in his late teens, early 20s” and he wore black shorts and has a little darker skin.

According to The Guardian the rifle from the scene had been recovered so that police believe the suspect to be unarmed at the moment.

Police are still unsure about the suspects motive but they will do everything to find out, Cammock said according to The Guardian.
A multi-agency team has been formed to reconstruct what happened Friday evening in Burlington.
